FOREWORD

There are various means of advertising that have their value, however satisfied customers are the best advertisers in any business. We have been prompted by this theory in our dealings with our clientele, and results have proven its value.

Instead of issuing a new descriptive catalog this year, we thought that a list featuring reduced prices would prove of greater interest. The attractive new varieties that previously have only been admired, are now so priced that iris lovers do not hesitate to give them a place in their gardens. Where mass planting and color effect is desired, the favorite standard varieties, now at their lowest price level, can freely be used. We have a number of last year's catalogs that will be mailed on request.

Unavoidable circumstances have delayed the issuing of this list, but we trust it will still be of interest. It is our intention to issue a complete catalog next year, with accurate descriptions of the different varieties.

The new hybrid Hemerocallis (Day Lilies) are attracting widespread attention. We have prepared a descriptive list of many of the new varieties, that differ enough as to color tone and blooming season to be of interest to garden lovers.

More than 100 varieties of better peonies are grown at our garden and listed in color groups in our revised 1934 Peony list. Both of these lists will be sent on request.

NEW INTRODUCTIONS 1933-'34

At the end of the season last year, we purchased stock of three fine seedlings from Mr. John Dee Wareham, who has been hybridizing for a number of years. A few of his introductions have been placed on the market at high prices. It was his wish that these varieties go out at a reasonable price, so that they may have a wider distribution. All are sturdy growers on strong stems and have splendid substance. The flowers are an improvement over any named variety we have seen, and they also have carrying color in the garden. Iris experts were very favorably impressed by their beauty this year. The blooms measure 4 to 5 inches from tip to tip.

CADMIA (M. 30")—Standard Light primrose yellow, erect and domed, deepening in color at the base; Falls are 2" wide, a tone darker, with a bright golden beard and deep canary reticulations at the haft. A lovely clear yellow, almost a self and undoubtedly the best and largest yellow of its height.....$7.50

CLAIRE de LUNE (L. M. 40")—The large, smooth textured flowers are borne on strong candelabra-like stems. A clear light bluish lavender self, with a deeper flushing in the center of the falls. Arching standards and broad drooping falls make it distinct in form. A deep red gold beard fading to white enlivens the center of the flower, and the white haft has dull olive brown reticulations....$5.00

K E N W O O D I R I S G A R D E N S

SAMERKAND (M. 36")—A brilliant bronze and red toned Dominion Seedling. The smooth arching standards are bronzy fawn flushed reddish violet; F. semi-flaring, a deep velvety carmine violet. Dark brown reticulation on a yellow haft. Beard intense red gold. There is a bright glow emanating from the center of the flower, caused by the brilliant beard and haft coloring.....$5.00

A strong blooming root of the three introductions for $14.00

ROBERT (Ayres-Emig 1933) (M. 36")—This fine iris was the high light of the garden. The large flowers have unusual substance, and were intact after a day of heavy winds, when many of the other new varieties were affected. The domed standards of pale amber have a tan cast, with a lemon yellow tone at the base. F. flaring with a pale blue flush in the center of the falls. It differs from Cadmia in color, form and height and both are quite distinct....$15.00

One each of the 4 outstanding new varieties for $25.00

PRICE LIST

For complete description, color class, average height, season of bloom, etc., of all varieties, together with other information, you are referred to the 1933 Iris Catalog.

DWARF IRIS

The Dwarf or Pumila Iris are the earliest to bloom, flowering from early April for a period of several weeks. They are invaluable to use in color groupings in the front of the hardy border, where the dark violet and red purple tones are a foil to the other low growing perennials then in bloom. Planted on the tops of terraces and in rock-garden spaces their beauty is enhanced. They have become very popular.

FALL BLOOMERS

These varieties have a second season in bloom, in the fall. They are quite reliable in the warmer sections of the country. In the more northern and colder states, it is necessary to plant them in a warm and sheltered place, in order to protect the flower before frost comes. They are mainly of the dwarf and intermediate type.

NEWER TALL BEARDED IRIS

This group is the one most widely known. Their ease of growth, brilliancy of color, together with their value as a cut flower has caused this popularity. They bloom in our locality from the second week in May until early in June, just following the Intermediate section. Sun and good drainage are essential for their success. Place the rhizome on the surface when you plant, except in fall, when it is advisable to plant more deeply to prevent heaving. Mulch with excelsior or straw the first winter. The clumps should be re-set every few years, and the old rhizomes thrown away.

BEARDLESS IRIS

The varieties in this section are excellent for moist situations, and are very decorative in the hardy border. They should be planted in early spring or fall and mulched with manure over winter. Plant rhizome an inch below the surface and keep moist until growth starts. They do best when water is liberally applied during the blooming season, and need a rich soil, free from lime.

As these roots need extra packing in order to ship them safely a 25c service charge is asked for all orders amounting to less than $2.00. Liberal sized pieces will be sent in the Siberian and Japanese varieties, not one or two rhizomes as are generally offered.

HEXAGONA SECTION

These bloom after the Tall Bearded, and are quite unique. Some have flattened forms like the Japanese, and embrace shades not found in other sections. Many are native to Southern States, but have been found to be hardy as far north as Minnesota. They like a rather rich and porous soil, leaning a little toward an acid condition. Cover with peat moss or excelsior over Winter.

RETICULATA (6")—Deep pansy violet with gold throat 25c each, $2.50 a doz.

SIBERIAN GROUP

The varieties of this group are easy to grow. They bloom about the same time as the Tall Bearded, and have a good landscape value, as for bordering a brook or pond, where they should be kept above the water line. The blooms are especially good for cutting, and last a long time when cut. These are borne on tall, wiry stems, and held erect above the narrow and grass-like foliage. The introduction of new varieties has added to their popularity.

SPURIA GROUP

These stately plants are well adapted for water side plantings, and are also very effective in the background of the hardy border. They bloom a little after the Tall Bearded, and are generally slow to increase. The rhizome should be planted quite deeply.

JAPANESE GROUP

These flowers seem to have an ethereal beauty, and are very lovely. Their blooming season extends from early June until the beginning of July. A slightly acid soil with plenty of peatmoss and manure in it is to their liking. Water liberally during the blooming season to get the finest flowers. The rhizomes should be planted in early spring or fall, and kept watered until the plant is established.

BUSINESS TERMS

PLEASE READ CAREFULLY BEFORE ORDERING

GUARANTEE—We endeavor to send varieties true to name. If an error occurs, notify us and proper adjustments will be made. We cannot be held responsible for results of plantings, because of lack of control over planting conditions. Heavy mother rhizomes will be sent wherever stock allows. We have received many unsolicited testimonials from our customers last year expressing appreciation of the size of the roots sent them.

TERMS—Cash with order. A 10% discount is allowed on orders of $10 and more. This applies to single varieties or 3 of a kind and not to collections or bargain groups. On orders for less than $2.00 please add 25c for postage and handling.

TRANSPORTATION—Prices for one and three of a kind are postpaid, but not in larger quantities. Collections are not prepaid, except where mentioned.

SHIPMENTS—Bearded Iris may be sent at any time except during the blooming season. Summer planting is recommended. Novelties will be shipped after July 15th. Beardless Iris are best planted in Spring and Early Fall.

LOCATIONS OF GARDENS—We are located on the 3 C's Highway (State Route No. 3), approximately 10 miles from the business center of Cincinnati. Montgomery Road is one of the main arteries leading out of Cincinnati, and easily accessible from all parts of the city. You are cordially invited to visit the gardens at any time.
